

Teresa Daw Student Internship Extended Application Deadline

Purpose

The Teresa Daw Student Internship creates an opportunity for one Indigenous (First Nations, Metis, Inuit) law student studying at an Ontario law school to earn a paid two-month internship with ARCH Disability Law Centre. This internship seeks to support law students with the mentorship of ARCH and its diverse partners to explore and work through live legal and disability-related issues that are of utmost importance to the student and their community.

How to Apply

To apply, and for more information on the Teresa Daw Student Internship program, eligibility requirements, and application process visit:

<https://archdisabilitylaw.ca/the-teresa-daw-internship/>

Application Deadline

ARCH will be extending the application deadline to March 31st 2025. This is a remote, two-month internship opportunity beginning in May 2025. Start and end date will be negotiated by the student and ARCH. Soon-to-be and recent grads are invited to apply!

Eligibility

ARCH seeks students who exemplify Teresa Daw's unwavering commitment to advancing disability inclusion and social justice by demonstrating a passionate interest in supporting their communities and seeking positive change.

To be eligible for the Teresa Daw Student Internship, participants must:

- Identify as Indigenous (First Nations, Metis, Inuit) living in Canada;
- be enrolled in a law school in Ontario; and
- fulfill the application requirements as set out on ARCH's website.